INTRODUCTION

1. The present publication lists standard codes and abbreviations of the English language names of countries or areas, together with standard codes of selected groupings of countries or areas, for use in processing and tabulating statistical data. It is an interim revision of the United Nations Standard Country or Area Code for Statistical Use, issued in 1975,^{1/} in response to urgent needs for an updating of that publication, pending finalization of outstanding matters involved in the development of a more comprehensive register of countries or areas. In addition to a listing of countries or areas in alphabetical order, as given in the 1975 issue, the present publication also includes selected groupings of countries or areas and a numerical-code-order listing of countries or areas and groupings.

Countries or areas and groupings

2. The countries or areas shown in this publication are those for which statistical data are or may be compiled by the United Nations Statistical Office as of 1 January 1982. The groupings of countries or areas shown are a selection of groupings of economic and social interest, used by the United Nations Statistical Office as of 1 January 1982.

3. In general, parts of countries or areas are not shown in the present publication. However, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic and the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic are shown, as well as the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, of which they are parts, since they are all States Members of the United Nations.

4. The groupings shown in the publication fall into two categories, namely geographical groupings and other groupings. The geographical groupings are intended to cover all of the countries or areas shown in this publication, and, at a broad level, are related to the continents of the world. Within the broad groupings, there is a more detailed sub-continental level of groupings of countries or areas often considered together because of homogeneity in economic or social factors. At each level, the geographical groupings are mutually exclusive.

5. The other groupings shown in this publication are a selection of groupings of mainly economic interest, used by the United Nations Statistical Office as of 1 January 1982. Some of the groupings are made up of countries or areas from different geographical groupings. The groupings do not cover all the countries or areas shown in this publication, and some countries or areas are included in more than one of them.

6. The set of groupings of countries or areas included in this publication is not intended to be comprehensive. It is only a selection of the groupings which are, or may be, used in compilation of statistics as of 1 January 1982 by the United Nations Statistical Office.

7. Groupings by stage of economic development and groupings by type of economic system are not included. They are under review and may be included in a later revision of this publication.

Name form

8. The names of countries or areas and groupings shown in this publication are the English language names in the form generally used in publications of the United Nations Statistical Office. This is not usually the full name as used in formal documents such as treaties, but is the name used for general purposes at the United Nations. Many are based on the terminology bulletin "Names of countries and adjectives of nationality"^{2/} prepared by the Department of Conference Services of the United Nations.

9. In some cases, in order to clarify which particular country or area is referred to, additional information is shown in square brackets after the name of the country or area, for example, Christmas Island [Australia]. In cases where information is shown within round brackets in the name of a country or area, it is an integral part of the name, for example, Cocos (Keeling) Islands.

Numerical codes

10. A unique standard three-digit numerical code is assigned for each country or area and each grouping of countries or areas shown in this publication. These codes lie within the range from 000 to 899, inclusive.

11. Codes 896 and 898 are assigned for "Areas not elsewhere specified" and "Not specified" respectively. The item "Areas not elsewhere specified" is used for the data of countries or areas not named in a given tabulation. The item "Not specified" is used for the data (or part of the data) of countries or areas named in a given tabulation where, for special reasons (such as confidentiality of the data or non-availability of the exact identity of the country), the allocation has not been made.

12. The codes from 900 to 999 inclusive are available for individual users of this coding system to use for their own purposes (for instance, to identify countries or areas and groupings not shown in this publication).

Abbreviations of names

13. Standard abbreviations of the English language name given for each country or area and each grouping shown in this publication have been developed within the United Nations Statistical Office. They are shown in maximum lengths of 8 and 12 characters and have been designed to establish some measure of visual association with the name of the country or area. In a case where the length of a name is less than or equal to the limit of the abbreviation (that is, either 8 or 12 characters), the name is used in place of an abbreviation. In some instances an acronym or a widely used short representation of a name is used.

ISO alphabetical codes

14. Alphabetical codes for the representation of names of countries or areas, of two and three letters (ALPHA-2 and ALPHA-3, respectively), have been developed by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) ^{3/} and are given, if available, for the countries or areas shown in this publication. The ALPHA-2 codes have been established for general purposes and are recommended by ISO for international exchange. The ALPHA-3 codes have been provided for use in those specific instances where three-letter codes would be of particular advantage.

Changes since last issue

15. Most countries or areas shown in the 1975 issue are included in the present publication. A few for which the United Nations Statistical Office does not publish data have been deleted. The following are new entries: Anguilla (660), Channel Islands (830), Isle of Man (833), Kiribati (296), Panama (591), St. Kitts-Nevis (659), Tuvalu (798) and Viet Nam (704). In addition, a number of names have changed or are presented differently; see the annex for a complete list.

General considerations regarding changes

16. The geographical coverage of a country or area, or the composition of a grouping, may change over time, and users should take such changes into account when using codes in this publication in relating data for different time periods. A change in the geographical coverage of a country or area, or in the composition of a grouping would generally not be accompanied by a change in the numerical or ISO alphabetical codes.

^{3/} Codes for the Representation of Names of Countries, second edition, International Standard ISO 3166, (Reference No. ISO 3166-1981 (E/F)). ISO is a non-governmental organization (with headquarters at Geneva, Switzerland) having consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council. It aims to promote development of world standards with a view to facilitating international exchange of goods and services and to develop mutual co-operation in the sphere of intellectual, scientific, technological and economic activity.

17. Further, a change in the name of a country or area while its geographical coverage remained constant would not be accompanied by a change in its numerical code. However, a change in name may be accompanied by a change in the ISO alphabetical codes.

18. In general, once assigned, the numerical code for a country or area or grouping remains unchanged.

Organization of the publication

19. The publication is organized into three parts and an annex, as described below:

(a) Part I lists the names of countries or areas in alphabetical order and shows for each country or area its numerical code, the eight-character and twelve-character abbreviations of its name and the two-letter and three-letter ISO alphabetical codes for the representation of its name.

(b) Part II lists the selected groupings of countries or areas and shows for each grouping its numerical code. Under each grouping are listed the names and numerical codes of the countries or areas making up the grouping. The groupings are shown in two categories, as follows:

(i) Geographical groupings. All the countries or areas shown in part I (and no others) are included under these groupings. Each country or area is included at the detailed level under only one grouping.

(ii) Other groupings. The groupings are made up only of countries or areas shown in part I. A country or area may be included under more than one of these groupings or may not be included under any of them.

(c) Part III lists, in numerical order, all the numerical codes and names of the countries or areas and groupings shown in parts I and II. The abbreviations of names of countries or areas and groupings and the ISO alphabetical codes of countries or areas are also shown. Additionally, the list includes the codes for "Areas not elsewhere specified" and "Not specified".

(d) The annex lists the changes in name or presentation from the 1975 publication to the present one.
